Beth Wright is leaving viscom vendor Bi-silque after more than a decade with the company.

Wright has been with Bi-silque since 2007 and in her most recent role as Chief Commercial Officer since 2014, based between its US and Portugal locations.

She will join the senior management team of US-based manufacturer Fellowes Brands in the newly created role of VP of Strategic Growth in July.

At Fellowes, Wright will be responsible for overseeing strategic expansion in the business professional channel. She will also collaborate with the existing teams to identify and implement enhanced opportunities for customers to partner with Fellowes, according to the firm.

Commenting on the appointment, Fellowes Brands CEO John Fellowes said: "We are thrilled to welcome Beth into the Fellowes family.

"She represents the values that Fellowes stands for, while embodying the very best of a capable, driven, and effective business leader. Beth's skillsets and personality will synergistically enable our strategic growth plan, THRIVE2020, while augmenting our senior leadership team and strengthening our future business prospects."

Wright added: "Fellowes has built a strong foundation and brand presence in our industry over the years and I am eager to add value and accelerate the company's growth plans. It is a great time to join the team and be a part of the exciting direction the company is heading."
