

Fellowes employee wins emerging professional of the year at BOSS Awards

Fellowes Retail Account Manager Emily Jones has taken home the award for 'emerging professional of the year' at a glittering ceremony in London.

Emily picked up the trophy at the BOSS Awards last week where judges noted her unwavering enthusiasm, charity events and contribution to the industry and wider community as 'remarkable'.

The office products industry's annual BOSS Awards honour the best people and businesses in the UK office supplies industry.

The 'emerging professional' award is given each year to individuals who demonstrate a major contribution to the success of their company, or who provide excellent professional service to their customers, suppliers and external stakeholders.

Judges from the BOSS Federation said: "Emily clearly demonstrates enthusiasm both in her personal and work life. She's competitive at work, whilst also raising money for charity. At Fellowes, she's never afraid to take on new challenges. Passionate about the industry and making a difference, whilst continuing to develop her own career, Emily is all set for future success.”

Darryl Brunt, Head of Country UK & Ireland at Fellowes added: “Emily is a shining example of our young talent and we definitely foresee success for her future career. She’s always a pleasure to work with and inspires the people she works with through her charity challenges.”
